City Saddened by Its Losses and Woes That Ebb From Front.

ARISTOCRAT AND PEASANT MEET ON COMMON LEVEL

End of Two Months of War Brings Hope of Final Success to Muscovites.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.
PETROGRAD, Russia, October 5.—Probably in no capital of Europe have the first two months of the war wrought such a change in the aspect and character of a city as in Petrograd. What was traditionally regarded as a city of dissipated pleasures and midnight gayety, quickened by the sale of vodka, has become in a short period as sober in tone as a nocturne. The streets are quiet and almost deserted at the hour when the night life used to begin. In the restaurants all the guests could be comfortably gathered around one large table. The Nesky Prospect no longer echoes with revelry, but is as quiet and orderly as 5th avenue on Sunday afternoon. The capital is, of course, saddened, like all cities of Europe, by the loss of its sons, but the gloom which ebbs back from the front.

In the general staff offices, which are at one side of the famous winter garden, the daily lists of the dead are published. In front of this structure, a line of peasants, their black shawls like blotches of ink against the blood-red sky, stand in long, patient lines, waiting for the names of their relatives. Some of them have found relatives in the published lists, and others morbidly apprehensive are trying to acquire sufficient courage to go upstairs and look.

Community of Grief.

Women of the better class, dressed in heavy furs, come forth with chalky faces and bowed heads and step into their carriages. There is no sobbing, no outward protest against the fate which has befallen them. Sometimes they stop and offer money and words of consolation to the peasant women who stand before them as paupers. There is the extraordinary spectacle of aristocracy and peasantry brought together in a community of grief. But apart from scenes such as these, the life of the capital is as busy as ever. The end of the building of war is the occasion for the kind of celebration which usually accompanies a great anniversary or a holiday. The Russian papers have been assisted in this by careful reviews of the fighting along the German and Austrian frontiers.

Russian Comment.

The Novoye Vremya makes the following comment:
"We have now finished the second month of the war. Although we were on the whole fortunate during the first month, we were overtaken by a great calamity. The second month has not been marked by a single failure. We have not only beaten the Austrians, but we have seen the conquest of a kingdom—Galicia—and a duchy—Ruthenia. We have captured strongly fortified positions during the first month as great provision depots, a large number of guns, trains, etc."
"We have hundreds of thousands of prisoners. Aside from the value of these successes from a military point of view, they are significant as a realization of our national aim, in that they give back to Russia land which was wrested from her 600 years ago. If we are able to hold this land these days in Russian history will be appreciated in the centuries to come."

German Soldiers Not Supermen.

Another Russian newspaper in referring to the recent repulse of the Germans along the Nieman river says:
"We have now proved to the German soldiers to be ordinary soldiers and not supermen which they have been called."
The new present unity of feeling in Russia and the loyalty of a population commonly thought of as revolutionary pervades every class. Restaurant keepers whose rooms were converted into military quarters during the mobilization of troops have yielded without hope of compensation.
"It is our duty," said one of them. "Why should we not help to pay for it?" One of the larger restaurants was fortunate enough to hold its first dinner to many as twenty guests. It was the same restaurant in which six years ago a Russian officer tested his first love and died a student who was dining quietly with his wife. He had neglected to rise when the Russian national anthem was played. On account of this and other similar episodes the orchestra in the restaurant had struck the national anthem from their program. Last night, for the first time since then, the orchestra played the national song. Every person in the room immediately rose to his feet.

Income Instead of Vodka Tax.

If the minister of finance is successful in carrying out a project which has been for some time under the consideration of a specially appointed committee, Russia will soon have an income tax to compensate the government for the enormous loss sustained through the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of vodka. This monopoly has yielded an average of nearly $100,000,000 annually (approximately $100,000,000).
There are two ways in which we are trying at present to raise this necessary revenue," said Minister Park in a recent interview. "The first of these is by the increase in present duties on ordinary commodities, with which we have already made considerable progress. Under the Russian fundamental law, when the duma is not in session, the emperor has the right to make laws affecting the revenue from already existing duties. Upon my recommendation several of these have already been made effect."
The creation of a new revenue will have to await the meeting of the duma. The most important of the taxes which I expect to present at the time is an income tax. The commission which has been studying this question has been so far that the principle operative in Germany."

JAILED FOR CALLING AUSTRIANS COWARDS

Vienna Police Promptly Arrest Cafe
Booster—Alena Well Treated, ed, Is Report.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.
VIENNA, October 2.—A remarkable letter from Vienna tells some new instances of the censorship in the Austrian capital and pays a compliment to the consideration shown to foreigners who are still in Austria-Hungary.
"That the censoring of the police against adverse comment on the military operations is to be taken seriously," says the letter, "is evident from the fact that a man who remarked casually in a Vienna cafe that the Austrian soldiers were cowards was promptly arrested and sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labor, with a fast day once a week, and a day's confinement in a dark cell once a month. Another man who had been overheard saying that the Serbians would be victorious received exactly the same sentence."

Newspapers from America have been held back at the post office for more than three weeks, according to the letter, and telegraphic communication has proven so difficult that the people have practically given up trying to dispatch messages.

Addresses in Code.

For correspondence with the soldiers at the front special post cards and envelopes are provided, and each man may be addressed by a code number, but his whereabouts are not divulged, and the news exchanged is subject to such a rigorous censorship that only a few commonplace matters are written.

"It must be admitted," writes the Vienna Informant, "that the Viennese, and indeed the Austrians generally, have treated the foreigners here, including even those of hostile countries, with a great deal of consideration. There have been no demonstrations against embassies or legations or individuals. In a few instances Englishmen have been the victims of some unpleasant incidents in the streets, but these cases were rare and of slight importance. It is the rule to avoid speaking either English or French, and in that event one may feel safe from annoyance."

Courtesy to Americans.

"The local official news agency has taken it upon itself to remind the people that there are over 90,000 Americans, whose mother tongue is English, and that in their midst are living many thousands of Austrians enjoying the hospitality of the great country in the world. It therefore became the Viennese to extend the greatest courtesy to Americans here."

"There are, of course, a number of young Englishmen and Frenchmen under arrest to make it certain they will not fight against Austria-Hungary, but they are being well treated, with the exception of the fact that they have to sleep on the straw-strewn floor of the detention camps. They are allowed to correspond in German with their friends within the monarchy."
"The French women—governesses mainly—have given the police more trouble than the men. They frequent the cafes and often talk loudly in abuse of the Austrian authorities."

The groom also were from Charlottesville, Edward J. Beck, twenty-four, married the younger sister, and Fred Pastner, forty-five years old, married the elder. ## Discussing Return to Paris.

LONDON, October 26.—A Reuter dispatch from Paris says:

"The question of the early return of the government to Paris is being seriously considered. The military situation as a whole is regarded as extremely satisfactory."

The walls of all the rooms of a new building at the University of Paris are lined with lead to make them impervious to emanations of radium, with which experiments are conducted.
